Brief Introduction of the Course

A Policy is of highest value in any democratic form of governance and not the person or designation. Because, a Policy is a mandate, tool and also a benchmark. It governs the behaviour of all stakeholders, ensures their interests and is also made by them. Policies are made at various levels-international, national and sub national; are of different nature-legislative, judiciary and executive; also available in different forms-Acts, regulations, circulars, incentives, monitoring and so on; everyone is impacted by the policy- as a maker or as a user. The Constitution of the Country is foundation of all policies. It has engrained all social reforms and philosophies within its folds. The Constitution is further decentralized into various forms and kinds of policies.

Thus, Policy making for the public involves professional expertise to understand all the social and academic philosophies, legal Acts, policy making processes, jurisdiction of policy making actors and acquisition of essential policy making skills. Most of the reports on evaluation of policies have highlighted challenges faced at the policy making itself. Besides that, policy making cycle as taught is not exclusive rather all stages of policy making such as policy implementation and policy evaluation are inclusive and overlapping stages to policy making. These are integral to cycle of Policy making. The course will be conducted with the help of examples taken from policies related to Right to Education, Mid-day meal and Inclusive Education. The course will be transacted online with the help of textual, visual and oral material. The learning of the participants will be evaluated. The participants will get either certification of participation or credits earned if successful on given assignments.
